NOTICE OF EXPRESSION OF INTEREST FOR THE IDENTIFICATION OF STUDENTS AT THE UNIVERSITY OF PAVIA INTERESTED IN PARTICIPATING IN THE EXPERIMENTAL PROJECT "CO-HOUSING AND CARING BETWEEN GENERATIONS" - INTERGENERATIONAL EXCHANGE MEASURES TO SUPPORT THE INCLUSION OF THE ELDERLY POPULATION – RECTIFICATION

Rectification Note:

Considering the changes to the participation conditions of the project and the deadlines for applications, this document rectifies the "notice of expression of interest for the identification of students at the University of Pavia interested in participating in the experimental project 'Co-Housing and Caring Between Generations' - intergenerational exchange measures to support the inclusion of the elderly population," published on the university's official register on 20/09/2024, protocol no. 172462 of 19/09/2024.

1. PREMISE

This notice aims to explore the interest of students enrolled at the University of Pavia (academic year 2024/2025) who wish to participate in the experimental project "Co-Housing and Caring Between Generations" – Intergenerational exchange measures to support the inclusion of the elderly population, as described in section 2 of this document.

Adhering to this notice does not create a commitment for either party to finalize the action for which interest has been expressed but aims to better define the area of interest to facilitate intergenerational meetings.

2. OBJECT OF THE NOTICE

The project includes the development of two actions:

a) CO-HABITATION: Intergenerational living and cohabitation between students and individuals over 65.

This action aims to promote an alliance between the student population and citizens over 65 in Pavia. It is not an assistance-type relationship, but an intergenerational pact aimed at fostering supportive relationships through a regular rental contract (cohabitation as a means of active inclusion).

The University of Pavia sees this intergenerational pact as an opportunity to support integration between the student population and those over 65, along with a strategy to address the increasing demand for affordable rental housing from students living away from home. The balance between supply and demand for housing has led to a significant increase in prices and insufficient availability of accommodations, which this project aims to address through innovative solutions such as "intergenerational cohabitation."

Alongside a "cohabitation pact," students will also provide essential yet fundamental services based on their skills and the needs of those over 65 (e.g., use of IT resources such as SPID; assistance in accessing healthcare; guidance to administrative offices; socialization and leisure activities, etc.). It aims to promote a new way of living that ensures better quality of life for both young and elderly individuals and combats loneliness through the sharing of relational resources.

The rental contract will be defined with the assistance of industry associations participating in the project, which will oversee the process, taking into account the actual space and services available to the guest. Accommodations may also be located in nearby municipalities. The University will contribute up to a maximum of 300 euros per month per student towards the rent. This rental contribution will be paid directly to the landlord.

b) GENERATIONAL SUPPORT: Relationships and services provided by students to support individuals over 65.

This action aims to offer individuals over 65 supportive services primarily focused on creating healthy friendships and solidarity relationships, based on volunteer work provided by university students, not necessarily in cohabitation situations. These activities include forms of meeting, listening, and information organized at the university on topics of interest to over 65, such as:

- Film screenings (film club) at the university's cinema-auditorium
- Musical evenings featuring student musicians
- Scientific dissemination events led by PhD students
- Health promotion days for the elderly
- Visits to museum locations and university exhibitions
- Visits to green areas and the Botanical Garden
- Wellness and fitness programs (university sports and leisure facilities)
- Days dedicated to intergenerational sharing of life memories. Additionally, at the university, thanks to equipped rooms with reserved study areas, students can support and train individuals over 65 in:
 - Using technological and IT tools (mobile devices, PCs, tablets)
 - Language conversations with foreign students
 - Reading texts.

The two actions (a) and (b) are not mutually exclusive. Interested students may express interest in one of the two actions or both.

Participating students will be awarded elective or additional university credits within their individual study plans based on the activities undertaken to support the elderly and/or Open Badges.
